Fall 2025 IRB Proposal: Transfeminine Interactional Styles and Experiences

Procedure and Prompt for Audio-Recorded Conversations between two Participants

Before completing the survey (also attached with this proposal) and the interview with me (described in the 'Interview Procedure' document also attached to this proposal), speaker participants will complete two recorded conversations, one with each conversation partner participant. Before beginning the audio recording, I will explain the task to the speakers verbally, saying something along the lines of:

> "After I start the recording, I'll start a timer for 10 minutes and ask that you work on this crossword puzzle together. You don't have to complete it, and if you get stuck or distracted and want to stop working on it before the timer's up, that's totally okay, just be sure to stop working on it after the timer's up. You're not being judged for how you do on the crossword. After you stop working on the crossword or after the time's up, I ask that you just chat for the rest of the time, trying to get to know each other, focusing on finding common life experiences, especially with respect to interests or gender."

I will then confirm participants' consent to record, announce that I have started the recording, start a 10 minute timer in the room, and a 25 minute timer on my phone, and leave the room. After my 25 minute timer has elapsed, I will knock on the door, enter, and announce that I have stopped the recording.
